

Consent to Share Information

The reunite advice line is a strictly confidential service, however, from time to time we do engage and co-operate with third party organisations such as the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, police officers and legal representatives to further individual cases. In such situations we would only speak to third parties with the expressed consent of the parent involved.

By completing, signing and returning this form to reunite you are giving consent for reunite to discuss your case, and information you have given to the advice line, with relevant third parties for the benefit of your case. We would only speak with the specific individuals or organisations you have given us consent to speak to, and further individuals and organisations can be added as your case progresses. Such consent can be revoked in writing at any point.

By completing this form you also give reunite consent to share this form with the agreed third parties, as proof of your consent.

In return for your consent, reunite staff will, when possible, inform you before contacting such third parties, and will discuss with you the outcome of any conversations.
